LONO LANGUISHES FOR SIX MONTHS

Family Quarrel of Famous
Maui Character Ends
In Jail

(Special to the Bulletin.)
WAILUKU, MAUI, Oct. 15.—Lono, a native with a mythological name, was sentenced by district magistrate McKay to six months in jail this morning for assault and battery on his wife, who by the way, is related by blood in some degree of consanguinity, to one of the highest "reigning houses" of Hawaii's dynasty.

Lono was a pretty good church goer some twenty-five years ago when he was a successful hack driver during the hey-day of Honolulu hack drivers. Lono turned his attention to church affairs, and names of noted philanthropists may be seen on his list for church building fund of the Hoomana Nanaue at Panewa.

He got the money but the subscription list is still open for the church is no nearer completion today than it was when he first started to raise funds. And perhaps funds are more sadly needed today than then. However Lono gave up the job for there are no new fields to work.

With undaunted courage he married again and became an inmate of a portion of Mokuhanu, Wailuku, now known as "Happy Valley," which pleasing cognomen was first given by a Mokuhanu maid clept "I Love My Mother." Happy Valley is a resort for mariners.

Last Wednesday afternoon, Lono bought some meat and gave it to his better half to cook. She did her part so well that when Lono peeped into the pot he found meat as black as charcoal so he upbraided her for her utter neglect in domestic science, but that in the undoing of their domestic felicity, Lono had been indulging in "Kaukapulu" the greater part of the day, and she was not far behind. Lono can deliver a discourse on the Bible and then end it with blasphemous epithets, and the latter he is quite a master of. So he began throwing these oral bouquets onto his wife.

She resented and knocked him down and held him by the throat. Lono struggled in vain. At last she banded down in her last efforts to make him throw out all he knew in the philosophy of blasphemy. He opened his mouth but could not utter a word, and in some chance way her fair cheeks reddened with madness and wine came into contact with his teeth and when finally she succeeded in getting away from him, the marks of an inch were left on her once fair brow, but now made incarnadine by the flow of blood.

Lono will now serve six months in jail for his deed. The County attorney's department was well represented at the trial while Lono defended himself in person. Result six months.

KASH UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

The Kash Clothing Co., has secured J. Cooper, formerly buyer for the S. N. Wood Company of San Francisco, to act as manager for their clothing store at the corner of Fort and Hotel streets. Mr. Cooper arrived here on the Alameda Friday. He has had large experience in the clothing and furnishing business and will lend this experience to the advancement of the store that will be placed in the store that will embrace the fashion designs of the largest cities. While the character of these goods will be metropolitan, the goods will be made to insure comfort for tropical wear. In addition to the change in class of goods, there will be an innovation to Honoluluans in the business policy of the store. For instance every clerk in the store is to be made to understand that returned goods are to be accepted without comment and other goods given in place when reasonable reason for the change is given. This innovation no doubt will not be taken seriously by the buying public until evidence of this intention is made by actual exchanges, but that is exactly what Mr. Cooper says will be the policy of the Kash.

SOCIALISTS WILL BE ABSTAINERS

Smaller Alcohol Consumption in Germany as Result of Campaign.

Berlin, Germany Sept. 16.—A temperance campaign which promises to have a marked effect on the consumption of alcohol in Germany has been begun as the result of a resolution adopted at the socialist convention in Leipzig. The resolution requires that the members of the party organization which numbers 600,000, shall abstain from brandy and other high alcoholic beverages and that they shall try to diminish the consumption of these drinks by their companions.

Though aimed chiefly at the distillery owning noblemen who under the new revenue laws enjoy special favors, in the form of rebates of taxes, the measure is supported also on social and hygienic grounds. It is approved by the independent press as the most important step yet taken to check the misuse of alcoholic drinks in Germany.

DAVID WAIWAIOLÉ CRUSHED TO DEATH

Haste That Made Waste
With Deadly Result
To One

(Special to the Bulletin.)
WAILUKU, MAUI, Oct. 15.—David Waiwaiolé the 20-year-old son of Hon. M. P. Waiwaiolé, Representative from Wailuku at the 1908 Session of the Legislature, was accidentally killed by the overturning of a small plantation car at Poliaia carbanks this morning. Young Waiwaiolé went to his work as usual this morning.

He and a Portuguese had named Manuel Brinzel commenced shoveling sand into a car used for hauling to a nearby government road where men were employed putting up tracks for plantation cars. There were three cars there and two men to each car. The men were doing work under contract with the plantation and so "uku pau" were the words that rang into the ears of the workers. Young Waiwaiolé and his companion then commenced digging and throwing sand in to their car as fast as they could. They were bent on filling up the car no matter how they did it. By so doing there was more sand on one side of the car than on the other and being thus unbalanced the car overturned and catching young Waiwaiolé above the hip, pinned him onto the sandbank and crushed him to death. His partner narrowly escaped the same fate by running away just in time to save his life. When he turned around he saw David with his face toward the sandbank—dead.

A few minutes before the accident Manuel warned David as to the manner he was throwing sand into the car, but his reply was "won't turn over." He filled a car the very same way last Monday and nothing happened, and so he thought his method was pretty safe. Deputy Coroner Clement Crowell summoned a coroner's jury this morning. They are holding an inquest this afternoon.

NEW BRIDGES FOR HAWAII RAILWAY

R. H. Elgin, manager for the Hawaii Railway Company, is a visitor at Honolulu. He arrived by the Mauna Kea this morning. Manager Elgin has just put through a deal for the construction of three bridges for the line between Mahukona and Kohala.

These bridges are to be constructed of crooked lumber on concrete abutments and Contractor Wilson already has his representatives on the ground doing preliminary work.

Last year Mr. Wilson built two bridges for the Hawaii Railway Company, each 350 feet long. By cutting out some of the marvelous old curves on the road they shortened it considerably, saving a mile of track. The new contract is a continuation of the same policy of improvement, and, when completed, it will save more than a mile of track besides giving a straighter road. One of the new bridges will be 110 feet high, and another one 92 feet high. The total cost of this contract, when completed, will be $18,000, and is proof that Kohala, as well as Hilo, is looking forward to a better business period.

FERRERA FOUND UNFAITHFUL SPOUSE.

When Ferrera, a member of the National Guard, returned from the big meeting recently held in the United States, he heard some rather compromising stories concerning alleged unfaithfulness of his wife, Rachael Ferrera. This afternoon Ferrera appeared at police station and swore out a warrant for George Friedenberg, charging him with adultery. He declares that he came upon the pair unawares and possesses sufficient evidence to convict.

James Duncan, timekeeper at Olan Sugar Co., returned on the Aorangi last Saturday and will continue his journey to Hilo per the Mauna Kea. He has been home to Scotland for a trip and was away four months to the day.

The Alameda was shifted to the Railway wharf this morning and the vessel is taking on a shipment of pineapples, bananas and other products for San Francisco.

J. A. Macaulay, the well known traveling man, who represents the Carter Ink Co., arrived today on the Toyou Maru, and is now registered at the Young Hotel.

HORSE DASHES DOWN KING ST

About 2:50 o'clock this afternoon a runaway horse caused a sensation on King street. The animal had gotten rid of the vehicle that it was drawing and raced along King street with the harness hanging on to its back.

A mounted policeman on a fat horse vainly pursued the runaway, but when opposite the Palace the officer's horse was all in, and the bolter gradually forged ahead. When passing the Young building Bruce Cartwright, Jr., who was standing on the corner, had a narrow escape; the maddened horse, however, swerved as he approached Cartwright and the young man escaped injury.

The horse was eventually captured and was found to have sustained a few injuries.

POLICE COURT JOTTINGS.

Things at the Police Court were very quiet today and most of the cases on the calendar were either dismissed or sent over to future dates. Fourteen Chinese gamblers who were charged with playing sup-choi were defended by Judge Humphreys, and he put up a defense that caused his clients to be acquitted.

Five other woovers of chance were fined six dollars each, and still nine others had their cases postponed till October 23.

The case against E. H. Lewis, charged with not complying with an automobile ordinance, was continued till October 22. Pat King who is down as a vagrant on the charge sheet, was told to appear on October 23.

Three festive drunks who had managed in some way to fill themselves with more than a fair cargo of booze, faced the music, and it cost them each $4 to get clear of the tolls.

Rachael Ferrera and George Friedenberg, who are alleged to have been carrying on an illicit love affair, were arrested this morning by Chief Leal. They will have to appear in court tomorrow morning and answer to a charge of adultery.

Chief of Detectives Leal is leaving for the Coast on the Alameda, which sails on Wednesday. Churchill Harvey-Thier, city editor of the Advertiser, and Charles Albright, formerly of that paper, also are going to the mainland on the old reliable ferryboat.

Judge Robbins' this morning granted the petition of Bertrana von Damm to be appointed administrator of the estate of the late Andrew Wiseman.

Dr. R. J. McFetigan and Mary Schubert were called as witnesses. The petition for the allowance of the accounts and final distribution of the estate of the late E. C. Macfarlane was continued until next Thursday by Judge Robinson.

FOREST RESEVE CONFERENCE TODAY

A conference that promises to have an important bearing upon the future forest reserve policy of the Territory convened at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in the throne room of the Capitol. The conference was called by Marston Campbell in his capacity as executive officer of the Board of Agriculture in an attempt to reach an agreement between the land owners in the district of Kohala and the Government in regard to the establishment of the Kohala forest reserve. It is admitted that the setting aside of a reserve is essential to the preservation of a water supply. There is an absolute agreement as far as the benefits to be derived are concerned, but there is a difference of opinion among the land owners as to the methods of procedure. The conference is for the purpose of attempting to reach a solution.

PLEAD GUILTY.

United States money order, pleaded guilty, as did Fujimoto, indicted on the same charge. Kim Moon Sing, indicted for impersonating an officer, pleaded guilty, as did also Lono Bolin, indicted for stealing government stores.

Y. Kimura, editor of the Japanese Chronicle, also admitted his guilt to the indictment charging him with sending his paper through the United States mails when it contained obscene articles.

Jacob J. Hirth, the Kekaha postmaster charged with embezzlement, pleaded guilty. The plea of Makino and his clerk, charged with having obscene post cards in their possession, was continued until Saturday. Sentence on all of the pleas were continued.

Captain Roberts, master of the British ship Kirkcubrightshire, is seeking some of his sailor men. The vessel was hauled into the stream and afterward anchored outside the harbor this morning. She is ready for sea but some of the men necessary to man the vessel have failed to return to the ship. The Kirkcubrightshire will probably get away for Seattle tomorrow morning along with the vagrant seamen. The vessel has just completed the discharge of five thousand barrels of cement brought here from Germany.
